We do not require credit check, tax returns, business plans, and most documents financial institutions require. We do understand you will have expenses to open this new business such as city permits, logos, food inventory, equipment, among others. We do require a down-payment. A new location / business will take some time to build clientele and we would like you to understand it is important to have other sources of income and or savings to ensure you can cover the weekly rental payments on your food trailer regardless if the business takes some time to pick up. Consequently, we ask:

16. If sales are not what you expect at the beginning, how long can you afford not having income from this business and still meet the weekly payments? Explain
